Ainsworth Mrs W 4 Mar 1913 p8

TRAGIC DEATH OF MRS. W. AINSWORTH

One of the saddest tragedies which has occurred in Montana was that which occurred at Columbia Falls on Friday afternoon. Mrs. Ainsworth, who had been visiting friends at Columbia Falls during the day, was returning to her home about two miles from the town, leaving her daughter Marion, to supply her place as pianist at the picture show that evening, and when she was next seen she was lying beside the road just across the Flathead river bridge, dead. Her daughter upon returning home Saturday morning found the body of her mother. The horse which Mrs. Ainsworth had driven when she left for home was found near home entangled in the harness and unable to move. The supposition is that the horse became frightened and ran away throwing Mrs. Ainsworth out upon the frozen ground and rendering her unconscious, where she lay exposed to the severe cold of the night and was frozen when discovered Saturday morning.

Mr. Ainsworth, who is a salesman, was found at Great Falls and reached his home Saturday evening completely overcome by the terrible accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Ainsworth came to Flathead about eight years ago and when they first came they lived in Kalspell, later moving to Columbia Falls. About a year ago they took up their residence upon a small ranch near the Falls, where Mrs. Ainsworth's desire of living in the country might be satisfied. She was never in rugged health and the hope that being out of doors a great deal of the time would prove beneficial to her health also made her wish to live in the country. She with her daughter and her son there enjoyed home life, and there Mr. Ainsworth came when his duties upon the road were finished. Mrs. Ainsworth was an accomplished musician and her services were often asked and always cheerfully given to aid any church or civic enterprise. She was one of the wide-awake women of Columbia Falls and her tragic death will cause a great many hearts to ache among those who were closely associated with her. She was one of the rare women one meets nowadays, who has always a cheery smile, and a kind word for all whom she meets, and it will be a long, long time before the gap made by her going away will be filled and the sorrows healed. Her son, who is attending school in Minneapolis, has come home and the funeral is being held at Columbia Falls today.

LITTLE CHILD DIES
AS RESULT OF SCALDS
 As a result of scalds which were received on Saturday the little two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Blachly, of 77 Fourth avenue west, north, died at about 11 o'clock this morning. The accident was a peculiar one and it seems almost incredible that it could have occurred as it did. It appears that Mr. Blachly threw a quantity of hot water out upon the ground in the back yard, and some child went into the house. He then heard the screams of the baby and went to investigate and found that the little one had fallen into the water, receiving the scalds which today caused his death. Dr. Little was at once summoned, and although all possible was done the baby was so badly burned as to be beyond medical aid.

DOWNING COMMITS SUICIDE AT LIBBY

Charles R. Downing, an old and respected citizen of Libby, committed suicide at his home Monday night by shooting himself through the head with a shotgun. He was dead when discovered by employes on his ranch.

The dead man evidently planned his self destruction quite a while before he committed the fatal act, which took place in a little cabin on the ranch not far from the family dwelling. The cabin was used as a bunk house by the employes, and the latter had been dispatched on different errands shortly before the suicide occurred. Mr. Downing evidently wishing to be sure that his designs were not going to be frustrated. His body was found lying on the cabin floor with the gun at his side. The remains were brought to town Monday night.

The news of Mr. Downing's suicide shocked the whole community, which was not aware that anything of so serious a nature was preying upon his mind. He seemed to be cheerful all the time, and his robust appearing constitution led people to believe that his health was always good. Friends assert that he was not troubled with financial difficulties, and the only motive that can be assigned, was gleaned from the fact that he was threatened with appendicitis, having remarked that he did not care to undergo an operation.

The deceased, who was 53 years of age, had been a resident of Libby for 20 years, and has resided on his ranch across the Kootenai river, about a night years. He leaves a wife and two daughters, the latter being Mrs. Clyde Daniels and Miss Carrie Downing.

Mr. Downing was one of the local war horses of the republican party and was postmaster of Libby for several years. He always took a foremost interest in public affairs, and his loss will be keenly felt throughout the county.—Western News.

He will be sorely missed by all, but what is our loss is his gain. Our deepest sympathy is extended to his aged wife and their relatives in their deep sorrow. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Ebley of Payette, Idaho, an old friend of the deceased.

Edward Harding was accidentally shot by his wife Wednesday afternoon and almost instantly killed, says the Libby Herald.

Mr. and Mrs. Harding went out east of town on a jaunt and took along a 22 rifle with which they were shooting gobbers. About 2 o'clock they had reached the Richards ranch and Mrs. Harding had shot at a gopher. Mr. Harding went ahead to see if the shot had gone true. Mrs. Harding reloaded the gun and failed to lower the hammer. Just as Mr. Harding was scooping over the gun went off. The bullet entered his back and came out near the breast bone. He lived less than a minute. Mrs. Harding was almost crazed by the accident, but she ran to the home of A. C. Herbst and told them of the trouble. Mr. Herbst got in his launch and came to town for the coroner.

Coroner Compf went out and brought in the remains. No inquest was held, as it was not deemed necessary.

DOWN SWOLLEN RIVER IN CANVAS BOAT ENDS FATALLY COBB HAS A CLOSE CALL

Upset in Whirlpool Two Miles Above Steel Bridge—Occupants Flung Down Stream—Hedrick Drowns Near Bridge

The spirit of adventure and love of sport was yesterday responsible for the drowning in Flathead river of W. H. Hedrick and narrow escape of C. Cobb. The men were making the trip down the swollen torrent from Columbia Falls to the steel bridge, twenty miles in a light canvas boat. All went well until a point was reached about two miles up the river from the bridge when the boat was drawn into a whirlpool and upset. The men kept them afloat until after they had passed the steel bridge. Here Cobb rescued and Hedrick, exhausted and possibly cramped, some two hundred yards ahead of Cobb, disappeared in the river.

The two men went to the Falls yesterday morning on the connection for the following story of their experience as told to a representative of the paper by Mr. Cobb this morning:

Cobb's Story

We were both enjoying the trip very much and 2 had experience none until we reached this whirlpool. Will had repeatedly said while going down the river that he would have missed the experience for nothing. Just above the whirlpool, the current divides about a small island. The vertex of the current just above this island is the spot where we were upset. We had no indication of the presence of this whirlpool until we were in it. The boat shot and settled slightly in the eddy, showing some water to get in. I got up from his seat and the boat had whirled around me. With both of us in the front it shot down like an arrow.

When I came up, I saw Hedrick floating in the water some little distance from me. I secured the only preserver we had in the boat and gave it to him with it. I knew that Will was a fine swimmer, and I am a good swimmer. I gave the preserver to him and went along with him, giving him some assistance which he afterward followed implicitly. I told him that we were far from the steel bridge; that we were lots of people there and that some one would rescue us. He seemed to be perfectly cool, but instead of snapping the preserver about his neck, he grasped it in his arms. After a struggle did he make. He floated along without an effort, the preserver keeping him in the center of the current. Knowing that I could do nothing more for him, I started to the shore, but could not make it. I went to the boat, which was full to the brim with water. After several minutes I succeeded in overturning it and getting some air beneath it, so it floated fairly high out of the water. At the time I rode on the boat, I was washed off and away from it.

Down Stream

The place where we were thrown overboard is about two miles above the bridge. When we neared it I began yelling as loudly as I could in order to attract the attention of those on the bridge and then plenty of time to get out of the river with a boat. Hedrick grabbed the start of me while I was floating under the bridge about a hundred yards ahead of me.

Just after I passed under the bridge I let loose of my boat and made a dash for the shore. About that time Lawrence reached me with a message saying that I could not get out without tipping it over, I held on for dear end. He rowed toward me and the drift let loose and grasped me. His boat was sucked under the whirlpool by the swift current and he also disappeared. I made my way to the shore waded about a hundred yards and exhausted and so numb I scarcely move. In the meantime (Continued on Page Eight.)

Lawrence and others had secured boats and gone down the river in search of Hedrick.

People on Bridge

F. D. Stoop and a party of people had just reached the bridge in a car when Hedrick floated under. Mr. Stoop did not have time to make an effort to help him. But seeing and hearing Cobb he secured a cable from the car and let it down for Cobb. However, he missed it by two or three feet. There were other people on the bridge, and according to Mr. Stoop, there was a big chunk of a log which might have been pushed off to Hedrick. But everyone was so excited that such a thing was unthought of.

According to those on the bridge, Mr. Hedrick gave no sign of seeing them as he floated by. His head was well out of the water, but he looked neither to the right nor left. They watched him for about two hundred yards before he disappeared. As to whether he sank is a matter of question, some believe that he must have been sucked under one of the numerous drifts. Others, and among them Cobb, claim that if he kept hold of the preserver he would have drifted down for miles.

After getting out of the water, Cobb looked at his watch, which had stopped at five minutes after 11. The swiftness of the current may be judged by the fact that they had come eighteen miles in a little less than two hours. According to Mr. Stoop, it was about 11, or a very few minutes after, when they passed the bridge.

Search in Vain

The sheriff's office was notified immediately of the accident. A message was sent to Mr. Bower at the county farm, about four miles below the steel bridge, and he and another man went out in a boat to watch for Hedrick. Others searched down the river from the bridge for a considerable distance, but nothing was seen of either the body or the preserver.

Mr. Bowers stated this morning that the current was very swift and that it divided in a number of places below the bridge. It would have been very easy for the body to have been sucked under a drift out of the main current. A reward of $100 has been offered for its recovery and many are searching up and down the river today. It is thought by some that the body will not be recovered until the high water has subsided. Others believe that it may have floated down to the lake. Because of the swollen condition of the stream it is very difficult to conduct a thorough search at this time, but everything possible is being done.

Mr. Hedrick accompanied Mr. Cobb as a substitute for Mr. Voelker, who carries mail on the east side of town. Voelker had expected to go, but learned that he would be unable to do so. He told Hedrick that he could not go and that if he wished he might take his place. Hedrick was anxious to go and he and Cobb made all arrangements the night before.

A sad part of the story is the fact that Mr. Hedrick arose early and slipped away from home without awakening his family or bidding them goodbye. Mrs. Hedrick was very much opposed to his going, but her attempts to dissuade her husband were of no avail. She was grief-stricken when told of his drowning. In answer to the solicitation of friends that they might do something for her, she repeatedly said that all they can do is to recover the body of her husband.

The Hedrick family came to Kallispell about four years ago from Logansport, Indiana. Mr. Hedrick secured a transfer to the local postoffice and has since been one of its most efficient and best liked employees. He was held in highest esteem by Postmaster White and everyone who knew him. The family came here for the benefit of Mr. Hedrick's health, and were preparing to return to their former home when the cruel blow of providence came which robbed them of husband and father. Two children, Vivian, and a two-year-old baby, are left fatherless.

Boat Upset Before

The boat in which Cobb and Hedrick were making the trip down the river is a twelve foot canvas one. It has twice before upset and plunged its owner into the water. This is the fifth narrow escape Mr. Cobb has had, three times from drowning, once while lost in the woods, and when he shot off his foot last winter.

He was severely handicapped in the water because of an eight pound wooden leg which he wears. Despite this handicap, which was constantly pulling him down, Cobb gave Hedrick the only preserver in the boat and assisted and encouraged him in every way possible.

Herolom of Lawrence

The work of Charles Lawrence in rescuing Cobb and attempting to save Hedrick borders on real herolom. He was working in his garden at the top of the hill by the bridge when he heard Cobb yell. At first he thought it was a child playing, but decided to investigate. He jumped into his boat and pushed out into one of the most dangerous parts of the river. After towing Cobb to the drift, his boat was sucked out from under him and he very narrowly averted following drift. After wading ashore from the drift, he ran through the mud and water for almost a quarter of a mile for the other boat, in which he made a search for Hedrick.

SEARCH TO BE MADE FOR BODY OF W. H. HEDRICK

Arrangements are being made by the Odd Fellows, Masons and Knights of Pythias lodges, to make an effort to find the body of the late W. H. Hedrick, who was drowned in the Flathead river last June. The members of these orders, together with any other men who will assist in the work, will meet at the K. M. corner, on next Sunday morning at 8:30 o'clock, and go to the river, where the forces will be organized under the direction of Sheriff Ingraham, and ground thoroughly gone over in an effort to find the body. The men will take lunches with them and devote the entire day to this work. Everyone is invited to join in the work. Those having conveyances are requested to place them at the disposal of the committees to carry the men to the river. The conditions at the river now are such as to make it possible to find Mr. Hedrick's body, and it is hoped that every man in the city who can do so, will turn out and assist in this effort.

Arrangements have been made for launches and boats and all who can supply conveyances to take the searchers to the river are kindly requested to do so.

SAD ENDING OF DAY OF PLEASURE

MRS. DR. HOUSTON OF WHITEFISH ACCIDENTALLY SHOOTS SELF TO DEATH

One of the saddest accidents which has taken place in this section in many years occurred Monday evening about 6 o'clock, when Mrs. Dr. H. E. Houston of Whitefish was instantly killed by the accidental discharge of a shotgun while hunting.

The accident occurred at the end of a day of pleasure, Dr. and Mrs. Houston, the doctor's sister, Miss Frances Houston of St. Paul, and C. H. Jennings of Whitefish having spent the day in hunting along the Stillwater river. About 6 o'clock they came to a small lake, and the doctor got out of the rig to reconnoiter, the remainder of the party sitting in the wagon, Mr. Jennings and Miss Houston in the front seat and Mrs. Houston in the rear, with two automatic and a pump gun beside her. Dr. Houston returned and reported that there were no birds upon the lake, and Mr. Jennings turned the team around. In doing so he struck a log, which caused the guns to slide down upon the bottom of the wagon. Mrs. Houston started to pick them up, and in doing so the hammer of the pump gun caught on some obstacle, discharging it, the entire load passing through her body just below the heart and causing instant death. The others were practically distracted for a time, but made their way back to Whitefish as soon as possible. Carver Waggener was at once notified and took charge of affairs. The funeral was held from the Methodist church at 10 o'clock this morning, and interment made in Conrad cemetery in this city, a special funeral train being put on for the purpose.

Before his appointment as railroad physician for the Great Northern, Dr. Houston resided in Kallispell for a number of years, where he and Mrs. Houston were well known and have a host of friends. He is a brother of Dr. Rodney Houston of this city, and the two brothers, as well as their wives, have always been very enthusiastic hunters. All were excellent marksmen and shooting has been one of their principal diversions. Some time ago both families went into Alaska on a hunting trip for big game, in which they were very successful, the ladies going as far as transportation facilities would allow, and the men continuing on into the interior.

Mrs. Houston was one of the most highly esteemed and respected women in Whitefish, and she has countless friends both there and in this city who greatly regret her untimely death. A sad feature is that she leaves three little girls, the oldest about 7 years, and the youngest a baby of six months.

A man by the name of Hunter, a homesteader near Camas, was found dead in a bath at the warm springs the first of the week. He had been in the bath about an hour and it is thought his death was the result of heart failure.

DEATH OF MRS. HURTEBESE

The death of Mrs. Alphonse Hurtebese occurred at 8 o'clock this morning at the Sisters' hospital, after a lingering illness. She had been in failing health for several months, having been cared for at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Eugene McCarthy, and only yesterday was taken to the hospital, as her condition had become so critical. Mrs. Hurtebese was born in the Province of Quebec, Canada, and was 85 years of age at the time of her death. She has made her home with her daughter for the past three years. She was the mother of fourteen children, nine now living, and two of which, Archie Hurtebese and Mrs. McCarthy, are residents of this city.

The funeral will be held from the McCarthy residence at 10 o'clock Friday morning, and from St. Matthews church between 10 and 11 o'clock, the hour having not been definitely fixed as yet. Interment will be made in the Conrad Memorial cemetery.

DIES OF TUBERCULOSIS.

Yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock occurred the funeral of Fred Jacobson, who died last Thursday at the county farm of tuberculosis. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Arno Strong and interment was made in the Deseraville cemetery. A brother, Matt Jacobson, of Nelhart, Mont., was present at the funeral. The two brothers had not seen each other for years, the news of the death being the first word that had reached Matt of his brother for five years.

George B. Jarrett, a former well-known resident of the city, died recently in Portland, according to news received in this city.

FRANK JOHNSON'S FUNERAL HELD MONDAY AFTERNOON

The funeral of Frank Johnson, who was killed by contact with one of the high-tension lines of the Oregon-Illinois Electric company at Weiser, Idaho, Wednesday, was held from the Catholic church at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon and the large assemblage gathered to pay the last tribute told of the esteem in which he was held.

J. W. Johnson, father of the boy, together with G. F. Redman, an uncle from Weiser, returned with the body Saturday. In speaking of the accident they say that no one could be blamed. Johnson was working, strapped to the arm, after the manner of linemen, when a spur on one of his climbers broke, allowing his body to swing around, coming in contact with one of the main lines. As he did so he called to the men below to cut him down, but Mr. Johnson, in speaking of the accident, says that he hardly believes his son know what he was saying, as death must have been almost instantaneous.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Johnson are deeply touched by the extreme kindness and consideration which have been displayed. Mr. Johnson states that the officials of the Oregon-Illinois Electric company left nothing undone which would in any way assist. G. F. Redman, an uncle of Frank's, who was foreman at Weiser, accompanied Mr. Johnson back to Kalispell. Friends both at Weiser and in this city have endeavored to soften the blow by their sympathy and acts of kindness, which is appreciated by the family beyond the power of words to express.

DEATH OF FRANK KANE

The death of Frank Kane of Dayton occurred yesterday at the Sisters' hospital, final dissolution being caused by an affection of the nose and throat. The deceased was born in County Mayo, Ireland, 69 years ago, and emigrated to this country when a mere lad. He lived in Pennsylvania for a time, but the spirit of adventure led him westward, and he came into this state with the first construction gang of the Northern Pacific railroad, and visited the scene of Custer's massacre on the Little Big Horn soon after its occurrence. He came to the Flathead twenty-five years ago, and for the past nineteen years has been a resident of Dayton, where he has always been held in the highest esteem.

Of his surviving relatives, only two were able to be with him at the last; a niece, Miss Rose Lovello of Milwaukee, and a nephew, J. M. Dean of Spokane.

Katiwara was one of a gang employed in some double tracking between Skyland and Summit. E. L. KELLY STRUCK BY TRAIN NEAR VISTA YESTERDAY. RESIDENT OF SPOKANE

E. L. Kelly, a flagman on the Great Northern at the tunnel on the west side of Vista, was struck by an oncoming train yesterday about noon while walking along the track, and killed.

Kelly, who was 73 years of age, complained of being ill, and yesterday went to Whitefish for medical attention, returned and got off the train at Vista, near the tunnel, while on his way a mile or more up the track. There was no witness to the accident, but when the body was found the marks showed that he had been struck in the face and on the side, and it is believed that he got too close to the track and was struck by an oncoming train. On his person was found a letter from his wife, giving her address as 8718 Superior street, Spokane, and she has been notified. The man, in company with another laborer, was hovelng mud from the tracks where a stream of water was gushing down the mountain side and as a train approached, one of the men crossed the track out of danger, but the other remained on the near side as he had corked his feet and could not cross the tracks in time. The death of Hugh B. Loudon suddenly occurred at his home in the lower valley this morning at about 9 o'clock. Mr. Loudon had been a sufferer from rheumatism for many years, and it is thought that this weakened his heart.
