Keogh Howard 13 Nov 1944 pg 5

Pacific Veteran Visiting Here
Marine Pfc. Howard F. Keogh of Butte, Pacific veteran who was returned to the United States for treatment of a tropical ailment, is spending a few days in Kalspell, visiting at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Byrne.

Howard fought on both Saipan and Tarawa—and Tarawa was the tougher of the two, he says now. The Japanese had been told by their officers that capture of strongly fortified Tarawa would require a year's campaign, with a loss of a million Americans and the Nips held on fanatically. "The imperial Jap marine is a tough baby," Keogh says emphatically, "but American marines are tough, too."

Jap snipers, who even hid under the bodies of their own dead, gave the Leathernecks plenty of trouble. Keogh's closest escape came from another source.

"I relieved one of our men on patrol one night," he recalls. "I gave him my foxhole and went to another one just about the time the Jap bombers came over."

"The next morning we found the other marine dead. He had been hit by a piece of shrapnel."

"We didn't find any water on Tarawa," Keogh says, "but there were wells on Saipan, and we got enough water from them for baths. We didn't have much entertainment, and when we got a few moments, we'd chase chickens. One day we caught 15 of them and broiled them on the end of sticks. They sure tasted good."

He afterward was with Boeing Aircraft in Seattle as an aeronautical engineer until his enlistment in the air corps. He is now spending a short furlough with his mother in Spokane.

Sgt. Kirkpatrick Is Listed As Dead

Mr. and Mrs. Warren C. Kirkpatrick have received information from the war department that no further information has been received regarding their son, Staff Sergeant Ward W. Kirkpatrick, who was reported missing in action May 15, 1943.

The information is contained in a letter from Major General Ulio, who says:

"Dear Mr. and Mrs. Kirkpatrick: "Since your son, Staff Sergeant Ward W. Kirkpatrick of the Army Air Corps was reported missing in action May 15, 1943, the war department has entertained the hope that he survived, and that information would be revealed dispelling the uncertainty surrounding his disappearance. However, as in many cases, the conditions of warfare deny us such information. The record concerning your son shows that he was a crew member aboard an aircraft which disappeared over the North Sea, while on a bombing mission to Wilhelmshaven, Germany.

"Full consideration has recently been given to all available information bearing on the absence of your son, including all records, reports and circumstances. These have been carefully reviewed and considered. In view of the fact that 12 months have now expired without receipt of evidence to support a continued presumption of survival, the war department must terminate such absence by a presumptive finding of death. Accordingly an official finding of death has been recorded.

"I regret the necessity for this message, but trust that the ending of a long period of uncertainty may give at least some small measure of consolation.

"I hope you may find sustaining comfort in the thought that the uncertainty with which war has surrounded the absence of your son has enhanced the honor of his service to his country and of his sacrifice."

Sergeant Kirkpatrick enlisted in the Army Air Corps a few days after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

T/Sgt. Steve E. Kisbo, who is stationed at McCook, Neb., arrived in Kalispell Friday to spend a 10-day furlough with relatives and friends.
