HUGH M'ELROY KILLED IN G. N. TRAIN WRECK

Well Known Citizen of Kalispell a Victim of the Latest Railroad Horror

FIVE PERSONS KILLED OUTRIGHT

Roadmaster Dillon, Engincer Vaughan, Brakeman Duer and Two Forest Rangers Completed the Roll of Dead--Rear End Collision of Freight Trains Near Cut Bank.

Five persons were killed in a freight wreck on the Great Northern last night near Cut Bank. Hugh McElroy of Kalispell, a forest ranger, was one of the victims. Dick Vaughn, one of the locomotive engineers, Tom Dillon, roadmaster, a brakeman named Duer, and another man thought to be a forest ranger, who accompanied McElroy. The wreck was caused by a rear-end collision, train No. 634 running into an extra freight train, as the latter was crossing the high bridge just west of Cut Bank. It is said the air would not work on the regular train, which crashed into the caboose of the extra going east. Roadmaster Dillon, of Whitefish, was riding in the caboose on the extra train and evidently tried to save his life by jumping, as his body was found in the ravine 150 feet below the bridge. The bridge was set on fire and destroyed according to the report received here. The other forest ranger killed may have been Forrest Harbin, of Columbia Falls, who was doing duty in that neighborhood, but Supervisor Bunker only hazards this guess, not knowing the facts. Hugh McElroy, who was killed, has been in the forestry service since May 15, and has been stationed in the Two Medicine country, his postoffice address being Lubec. His last visit to Kalispell was made the first of the month and Mr. Bunker believes he was making a trip to Cut Bank on official business at the time he was killed. He is a son of J. A. McElroy and the family came here from Bozeman about five years ago. His mother and father and sister reside in Kalispell and a brother, Harry, is teaching school at Bigfork. Mr. McElroy, Sr., is a rural route mail carrier and had started on his daily trip before the news of his son's death was received here this morning.

It cannot be learned whether or not Hugh McElroy had a membership in any of the local fraternities, although he has been an Eagle, but dropped out some time ago.

As no train from the east has reached here today it is thought the wreck caused considerable trouble on the railroad.

It is now stated by the forest supervisor that Forrest Harbin was killed in the wreck.

FATAL HUNTING ACCIDENT.

Man Killed in the Woods on Swan Lake—Mistaken for a Deer.

Aaron McGuire was accidentally killed Friday forenoon, five miles from the head of Swan lake where he was hunting. His father-in-law, J. C. Eslick fired the shot which killed him.

Mr. Eslick and McGuire and two sons and a cousin of Eslick were out on a hunt in the forests. McGuire and the elder Eslick were hunting together and at a certain point separated intending to cover opposite territory. After a time Eslick found the trail of a deer, jumping the animal up twice, but each time the deer got away. As he was cautiously proceeding, expecting every moment to jump up the deer for the third time, Eslick saw the bushes shake a short distance away and without considering probability of any human being in range he blazed away and blew the top of McGuire's head off. Mr. Eslick is naturally much distressed over the result of his carelessness. The dead man was taken to camp and telephone message sent to KallsPELL. The coroner and B. I. Minch, representing Sherman's undertaking establishment, proceeded to the place, bringing the dead man to KallsPELL.

A coroner's jury was empaneled Monday and viewed the remains, adjourning then until this afternoon. The funeral of Aaron McGuire took place at 11 o'clock this morning, interment being made at Conrad Memorial cemetery.

The dead man who was 36 years of age came from Webster county, Iowa, about a year and a half ago and has been with his wife and two children, living at his father-in-law's place near Creston, working the farm on shares for Mr. Eslick who is 65 years old. A wife and two children survive him.

This is the first fatal hunting accident which has occurred in this vicinity for nearly three years. The deadly bullet was from a 30-30 high pressure rifle and the wound was a terrific one, tearing the top of the man's head off and shattering the brain.

Everything possible was done for her but she became unconscious on Thursday and passed away in that condition, paralysis being the ultimate cause of death. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon, Rev. Fringle reading the service. The interment was in the Conrad Memorial cemetery.

Mrs. McMoran was born in Oil City, Pennsylvania, on September 3, 1846, and lived there until after she was married, when she went to Menominee, Wisconsin, where she resided until she came to Montana eight years ago, and since her arrival has made many friends who sincerely regret her demise.

Mrs. McMoran leaves three children, Mrs. Manly Harshman of KallsPELL, W. L. McMoran of St. Paul and Ed McMoran of Spokane.

At her home in Somers, Mrs. Miles died, February 25, in her 49th year. Mrs. Miles was born in Tennessee in 1857, was converted and united with the Baptist church when 18 years of age. In 1880 she was married to Mr. Miles. They have seven children. While in failing health for some time the end came suddenly at last. She had reached the desired haven, forever with the Lord. Dr. Taylor, who is coroner, gathered a coroner's jury and went with Undertaker Sherman to the place where the body was found. The witnesses also being gathered together. The body was found along side the slough, a backwater of the Stillwater river, where the logs from the drive are usually run and sorted out for the mills lower down stream. The man was identified as Mori, for some months employed by Gus Heller as a saloon porter. He left Heller's to join a threshing crew about two months ago and had been working about the neighborhood in that capacity. Neither of the men were recognizable when their charred bodies were taken from the ruins, although they were easily identified. It is stated that Brick was awakened by his roommate, but did not realize the danger and dropped to sleep again. Mullins was forgotten, and the flames spread so rapidly that there was no chance of rescue.
Jack Mullins had been working on the drive all spring for the Otterton Lumber company, and was in Kalspell last week.

ALL FROM THE BOAT TO THE RIVER

Was Probably Carried Under Ferry Boat and Drowned. Team of Horses Also Plunge Into River and Are Drowned—Her Escort Powerless to Effect Rescue.

Miss Susie O'Neill, a sister of Jack O'Neill, was drowned at the Holt Ferry Monday night. In company with Mr. Porter she was crossing on the ferry when the accident occurred and she was sent to a watery grave.

Mr. Porter reached Kallispell at 4 o'clock this morning, bringing the body of the drowned girl. Porter got the necessary assistance for dragging the river for the body of the drowned girl.

The circumstances are very unusual. Mr. Porter only occurring that Miss O'Neill had made some mistake at the O'Neill butcher shop. Mr. Porter had made some mistake and Miss O'Neill had introduced herself and asked to accompany him for a short drive during which he was anxious to obtain all the information Mr. Porter could give her. Jack and Clarence Cronin, discussing the Somers holdup, drove, by her request, to the hill where Peterson had been the robbery took place. O'Neill was so interested in the reason with Mr. Porter that she asked Mr. Porter might take her for a drive, and after stopping at a house to get coat and hat they went upon the drive to Holt. Miss O'Neill was intent upon obtaining full details concerning events leading to Jack's present troubles. She had been in the country but a short time, about six months, and was not acquainted with the earlier history of the principals in the alleged case. She knew Mr. Porter intimately acquainted and she learned through an examination called to bring out all that he knew missed concerning the affairs.

When they reached Holt, they crossed the ferry and had supper at Bigfork, at about midnight started for home. When they were near the Holt ferry Mr. Porter jumped down from the rig to see if the boat was on that side. It was about 11 o'clock and no one was in sight. The boat was there, and as is his custom, Mr. Porter prepared to make the trip. Having been assured by O'Neill that she could drive, he sent the way for her to drive onto the ferry, and then busied himself in arranging the boat for the crossing.

After they had left the landing no word was spoken, Mr. Porter attending to the boat and the girl sitting in the buggy holding the lines. The moon was shining and near the middle of the stream Mr. Porter saw several small logs drifting toward them and observed that they would strike the boat, but as the current is not swift gave little heed to them as there was no danger. When the logs struck the boat he heard Miss O'Neill give a little cry followed almost immediately by a splash in the water. As he looked hastily around he just saw a skirt disappearing under the water. The girl had either jumped or fallen into the stream, on the up side. Knowing that she must have gone under the boat Mr. Porter threw off coat and boots anxiously peering into the moonlit water for her appearance. He looked down the stream, knowing that he could save her if he could only get a sight but his search was vain.

The team became excited and one of the horses breched over, dragging the other and both were drowned while Mr. Porter was intently observing the stream frantically hoping for a chance to rescue Miss O'Neill. She must have fainted as she fell, however, for not a trace of her could he see.

He is not certain whether she fell from the buggy in an attempt to get out of it and missed the guard rail on the boat, or became frightened when the logs struck and sought safety by jumping into the river. That will always remain a mystery.

Mr. Porter at once despatched a messenger to the reservation spring, where Jack O'Neill has been for the past two weeks, and where also are Mrs. Porter and her brother, all of whom will hurry to Somers. He came to Kallispell as above related, informed the authorities and sought other assistance.

Miss O'Neill is said to have been about 26 years of age, a bright, smart young woman. She came out to Somers about six months ago from Pittsburg, Pa., to make her home with her brother. She and Mr. Porter were strangers until the day of the tragedy, and under the circumstances Mr. Porter feels very badly.

BODY RECOVERED.

Wednesday Morning O. K. Morton Was Successful in Raising the Corpse.

The body of Miss Susie O'Neill was recovered from the Flathead river Wednesday morning by O. K. Morton who, with a man in a boat, had been fishing the bottom for several hours.

The drowned team of horses still attached to the buggy were raised a short distance below the ferry cable. Miss O'Neill's body was found considerably further down stream, as body had been in the water only 30 hours and was in perfect preservation. The steamboat coming along opportunely the body was thus transported to Denerville and Kallispell where Undertaker Sierman took charge of the remains. An autopsy was held by Dr. Taylor and Drs. Bortoff and Bortoff, details of which have not been made public.

A jury was empanelled Thursday night by the coroner, and viewed the remains, which were then turned over to the grief stricken brother, who this morning started east with them for their old home in South Milwaukee, where an aged and broken-hearted mother awaits them.

Testimony is being taken by the coroner's jury this afternoon, for the purpose of establishing the cause of death.

Plunkett John H 23 Mar 1906 p1

John H. Plunkett, a Kootenai ranchman, was murdered at his ranch, three miles from Troy, on the north side of the Snake river. Tuesday. Two men were arrested for the crime. The sheriff, Dr. Taylor, coroner and County Attorney McKeown went to Troy Tuesday night. There was no report held, but the two men arrested were given a preliminary hearing in the justice court. An autopsical examination, however, and the cause of death established. Particular attention to the tragedy was given the fact that John H. Plunkett's wife and family are well known in Kallapell and vicinity. The man accused of the murder is named Kuhn, a native of Idaho, formerly of Spokane. The story of the crime, gleaned from the present at the trial, is as follows: The murder was about as follows: In September last John H. Plunkett, having been to Lewiston returned to his ranch with a woman whom he had met in Lewiston. This woman was Mrs. Plunkett, and her follower, who had been with the woman when Plunkett took her up. Plunkett had his new wife to the splendid ranch to enjoy the country and fishing. Kuhn was introduced to a little cabin 75 yards from Plunkett's house. He is a little fellow and knew very little about the ranch, but was allowed to stay on from month to month, doing odd jobs about the ranch, and boarding with the Plunketts. A few days ago the Plunketts decided to get rid of Kuhn, and told him the constable would take him off if he did not leave the place. Kuhn, demanded wages for the six months he had been there and quarreled finally with Plunkett, threatening to kill him. On Tuesday Kuhn came back from a trip to Troy with a companion and his guard was renewed. In fear of his life Plunkett sent a neighbor girl named Drake to ask assistance of his next neighbor, a Mr. Wallace, and tell him to hurry to his aid as he had Kuhn and the other were going to kill him. Like a good neighbor, Wallace hastened over to his neighbor's house. Just before he came to the edge of the clearing he saw Kuhn, rifle at shoulder, standing and exchanging shots with some one inside. Wallace ordered him to drop his gun as he got within reach of him. Kuhn did so, but remarked, "Everything I did was in self-defense." Taking the rifle Wallace ordered Kuhn to go to his cabin and stay there. He then went to the house. As he opened the door Mrs. Plunkett rushed out with a shotgun and said she was going to kill Kuhn, but he got out of range. Inside the house Plunkett was sitting down in a room having suffered his death wound. Wallace had the two men, Kuhn and his companion, in unknown grounds, in Troy, and sent for the sheriff and coroner. The bullet which killed Plunkett was a revolver bullet, but when Wallace had change there were no guns to examine but rifle and a shotgun. Mrs. Plunkett said her man was shot three times, but there was but the wound in his back, a pistol bullet, evidently fired from an angle from the middle, which entered his chest at the middle, and ranged upward to the crown of the right shoulder. A large vein was cut and Dr. Taylor believes that it might have been 75 minutes before Plunkett fell.

The Fourth Victim Dies.--Others Are Buried.--Coroner's Inquest at Whitefish.

Charles A. Quinn, conductor on the ill-fated eastbound train, died last night of his injuries. The direct cause of death was a crushed abdomen. His wife and children had come from their home in Havre to the bedside of the dying man.

Dr. Lees examined the other victims of the wreck for the purpose of describing injuries which caused death. Ole Hansen, who fired for Therwester, was scalped to death and also had wounds on the head which might have caused death or insensibility before he could experience any painful sensations from the steam.

W. M. Kangley, Hadden's fireman, who was caught under the dome of the locomotive was fearfully shattered and undoubtedly met death instantly. His hip bone was broken and driven into his abdomen; his left leg shattered from ankle to thigh.

Express Messenger Wurzbacher had his chest crushed in over his heart by the weight of the car's contents which fell upon him in the upheaval.

Kangley was buried at Kalspell, yesterday; the remains of Wurzbacher and Hansen have been shipped to Iowa.

The coroner's jury held a two days' session investigating the cause and blame for the death of the first three victims. The jury consisted of business men of Whitefish, J. H. McCabe, Tom Alexander, F. H. Sprague, C. A. Wright, E. A. Long, C. A. Mathews.

Considerable evidence was introduced, having more or less bearing on the accident, but the verdict of the jury was that the evidence did not warrant them in charging the blame to any particular one. The feeling at Whitefish among the railroad men is purely sympathetic. Engineer Hadden is very much worried and in constant pain; Therwester is holding his own but shows no improvement in condition.

Buried at Havre.
The body of Conductor Charles A. Quinn, the fourth victim of the Columbia Falls wreck on the Great Northern, was taken to Havre Saturday morning and the funeral services were held at the Methodist church on Sunday.

He was popular and well liked by everybody in Havre, Glasgow and Williston, and his sudden death is a severe shock to his friends, all of whom extend their sympathy to his bereaved wife.

Roe Maud 17 Jul 1908 p8

Mrs. Maud Roe.
The death of Mrs. Maud Roe occurred at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Grant, Friday morning, July 13.
She was born in Gage county, Neb., August 11, 1876. Ten years ago she came to Kallispell with her husband. Always faithful to the requirements of her church, she dwelt in spirit of that responsibility to God which the church teaches and commands.
Socially and as a neighbor and friend, Mrs. Roe had endeared herself to a large circle who sadly heard of her demise. They will miss the sunshine of her presence. They who miss her, while regretting the loss of her bodily activities, have still the assurance that she is "Not lost upon a bounden sea,
Not dead, but living unto thee."
One step nearer God and so with greater helpfulness for those behind.
The funeral took place at 2 p. m., Sunday, at the Episcopal church. The day was bright and beautiful. Every part of the office for the burial of the dead was so consistently rendered that none of its comforts and beauty were lost. The fragrance of sweet flowers and purple vestry of the altar on which fell the bright sunshine, was as the close of a perfect day when the sun lingers for a moment in benediction of glorious light. A husband and five children, father, mother, two brothers, will mourn the affectionate wife, loving mother, obedient daughters kind sister who fell asleep in Christ, Mrs. Maud Grant Roe; aged 29 years, 11 months, 2 days. "The rest forever and the rapture, and the hand that wipes all tears away."

ENGINEER IS ALSO AMONG DEAD

Monday Morning's Westbound Train on the Great Northern Jumps the Track West of Sandpoint—Engine and Four Cars Plunge Into the Lake.

Messenger telegraphic reports of a wreck at Laclede, a station on the Great Northern railroad, a few miles west of Sandpoint, have been received today. The report is that train No. 5, westbound, Monday morning, which was several hours late, jumped the track just where it comes out of the canyon and hugs Pend d'Oreille lake. There is a big fill there and at the bottom beats the waves of the lake. Engine, baggage, mail car and express, dropped into the water and out of sight, and it is reported the smoking car plunged to the depths below.

It is certain that George Strickland, who was express messenger on the train, was drowned, and it is also reported that Engineer Munson is among those lost. Other fatalities have occurred but it is impossible to get any authentic news, further than the death of the express messenger. This was obtained through the kindly offices of Express Agent Bennett, who, in the interest of the Strickland family, succeeded in getting direct word from the com-

A KallsPELL man, formerly employed on the road, states that the track in that vicinity is a most hazardous one. From the deep cut, overhung with gigantic boulders, which threaten every train which passes, the track leads out to the rim of a precipice, the waters of Lake Pend d'Oreille showing dark and fathomless below. As a place of horrors it is ideal for an accident, and every engineer respects a "slow order" on that piece of road.

George Strickland, whose death is reported, had lived in KallsPELL since boyhood. His family came here in the early days. Previous to his getting a run on the road, he was in the local office here and delivered express in the city. He was an exemplary young man not quite 22 years of age, and had many friends in the city. Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Strickland are his parents. His mother's health is not of the best and it is feared the news of the tragedy will have a serious effect. There are also two sisters, Grace and Olive, resident in KallsPELL, and the entire family is prostrated.

The ill-fated young man was visiting his family in KallsPELL Sunday, the first time in two years. His regular run was on the west end from Seattle to Vancouver. He was taking a lay-off, which he expected to spend in KallsPELL, and made the fatal trip at the request of a messenger who wished to lay over.

It is learned from the family that George Strickland was married a short time ago and that his wife will bring the body home to KallsPELL as soon as it is recovered. She left Seattle as soon as she was notified of the accident.

SCOTT WINNETT KILLED

Well Known Rancher of Columbia Falls Is Killed in a Runaway. Horse Was an Outlaw.

Special to the Kallispell Bee. Columbia Falls, March 29.—One of the saddest and most fearful accidents on record in the valley occurred at Columbia Falls, Thursday, in which Scott Winnett was almost instantly killed by a vicious horse at his own gate.

The accident, which occurred about 4 o'clock in the afternoon was one of the most heart-rending of its kind and was witnessed by several persons of the neighborhood, all of whom were powerless to render any assistance to the unfortunate man.

Mr. Winnett had been the owner of a vicious horse for the past year and several accidents had resulted from driving it, and he had barely recovered from injuries received in a runaway two weeks ago. He was returning from the slaughter house and was within a short distance of his home, when the horse took fright, apparently at nothing, and started toward the house at a mad pace. Mr. Winnett was powerless to control him but clung to the reins till the last, frantically calling to him to stop. The horse, on reaching the gate, plunged directly through it. Mr. Winnett was thrown from the buggy and struck violently upon a pile of rocks, crushing his head and side terribly. When reached by his friends he was in an unconscious condition, in which he remained until his death, which occurred about an hour later.

The death of one of the most prominent citizens of the community will be deeply felt in Columbia Falls and elsewhere.

Mr. Winnett was one of the early pioneers of the valley. At the time of his death he was about 38 years of age.

He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his untimely death.

The funeral of the late Scott Winnett took place at Columbia Falls, Sunday, under the auspices of the Kallispell lodge of Elks.

L. Buzzell officiating, interment being made at the Conrad Memorial cemetery. Mr. Woodcoe was married a few months ago and leaves considerable property.
