DESPONDENT OVER ILL HEALTH: CLOVER RATH COMMITS SUICIDE

LIFE ENDED BY SHOOTING THROUGH TEMPLE WITH A .410 GAUGE PISTOL. TRAGEDY OCCURED AT RATH HOME SOON AFTER 6 O'CLOCK LAST EVENING. BODY FOUND BY MOTHER AT 6:30

Despondent over a facial infection which she evidently feared might disfigure her for life, Clover Rath, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Rath, and their only child, committed suicide by shooting herself through the head, some time between 6 and 6:30 last evening.

She had been at her father's drug store on West Second street until about 6 o'clock when she obtained some supplies from the Williams grocery next door and started for the Rath home in the apartment over the Listle cafe.

Mother Discovers Body

The tragedy was discovered by her mother who had been shopping and returned home about 6:30. She found the body of her daughter lying on the floor in her room, and beside her was a 410-gauge pistol, with which she had shot herself through the right temple. Coroner Campbell and Sheriff Ripke who were called, discovered that the righ hand had been bruised by the recoil of the gun, so there was no doubt that she had herself fired the shot. J. F. Reagan, proprietor of the cafe, says that neither he nor any of his employes heard the shot, but it must have occurred soon after 6 o'clock. An inquest was not considered necessary by the coroner.

No note was found indicating why she had wished to end her life, but her parents say she had been despondent for two or three days. In the room was found a book of poems open at a page on which appeared the words, "Good-bye forever," which had been marked in pencil with the date—April 10. Death was evidently instantaneous, Coroner Campbell says.

The unfortunate girl was 19 years of age, and was born in Kalispell. She attended the grade and high schools in Kalispell, after which she graduated from the Anne Wright seminary at Tacoma, Washington. Last fall she entered the University of Washington, but on account of ill health did not return after the holiday vacation.

Much sympathy is expressed in the community for the bereaved parents.

Funeral services will be held Monday afternon at 2 o'clock at the Waggoner & Campbell chapel, Rev. G. William Barnum, officiating. Interment will be in the Conrad Memorial cemetery.
