Announcement Party

 At the three small bridge tables, a clever centerpiece was a pumpkin, which had been hollowed out and cut with doors and windows like a bungalow. Coming from the inside of the pumpkin were ribbon streamers, to each guest's place, to which the place-card and score tally were attached. When the guest drew the ribbon streamer from the pumpkin she found another card attached to it, on which was a "diamond ring" and a personal note from the hostess on which she stated that her marriage would take place in November.
 Decorations about the room were lovely autumn foliage and flowers in shades of yellow, orange, and brown, and centering the dining table was a bowl of pink rosebuds.

Afterward, everyone enjoyed a number of games of auction bridge, and at the end of the games, Miss Vera Ann O'Neil was awarded the high score prize and the traveling prize.
 Present at the party were old school friends of the bride-to-be, members of the two families and close friends.

Flowers and white chrysanthemums were arranged about the altar.
