ROGER WADE SHERMAN

(By IRLS KURTICHANOV)

Seldom does community respect and esteem for the character of one of her citizens rise to such magnificent and impressive expression as it did for Roger Sherman yesterday. This is all the more impressive when that citizen is not a famous character with an impressive array of great achievements to his credit, but a boy whose outstanding contribution to his fellows was a character of superior excellence. One could not but feel that the presence of so many people signified, of course, sympathy for the grieving relatives but more especially a tribute for Roger as a boy—"An Ideal American Boy"—as one school-man characterized him. The impression was most generally felt that the ideals of unselfishness and love of fellow-folks were glorified in Roger, and his memory will inspire these ideals among the boys and girls who knew him.

Long before the hour set for the rites at Christ Episcopal church, the church was filled to overflowing and many stood on both sides of the adjacent avenues awaiting the arrival of the funeral procession. The band in full uniform, without instruments and in complete silence led the procession. Next came the full troop of Boy Scouts marching in double lines and flanking the casket as it rested before the chapel door. At the end of the line came the guard of honor, Roger's favorite, the High School band, of which he was a proud and devoted member playing the clarinet. An in stance of his devotion to the band was his recent foregoing of a very much desired airplane ride for the sake of attending band rehearsal in stead. The members of the band dressed in white, carried their instruments in respectful silence. Each instrument bore a badge of mourning.

Six of Roger's closest friends boys of his own age, acted as pallbearers. They were Jack Anderson, Bob Stevens, Jimmy Baldwin, Donald Riley, Ivan Hanson and Billy Salting.

The services at the church were appropriately brief and impressive leaving a sense of youthful hopefulness.

Scores of cars bearing sympathetic friends followed the body to the final resting place in Conrad Memorial cemetery. The site selected was one which Roger might have selected, a plot on the western edge overlooking his beautiful hometown.

The floral tribute was one of the largest ever seen in Kallspeil. Somebody who seemed to understand Roger and his idealism arranged that a good share of the flowers spread over adjoining graves, thus giving expression to his life spent in doing things for others.

As a final act in the services at the graveside Bobby Durr, a fellow-member of the band, a trumpeter, played "taps" in tones that expressed the deepest feelings for a fallen comrade. And then out of the lovely silence "taps" played by John Evans were heard in refrain from a distant hill top, leaving us all with a sense that all is well with one who has lived so much and so well and so brief a while.

Among the many out-of-town friends attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius F. Kelley, New York City; Mrs. L. O. Evans, St. Paul; Mrs. Eugene Van Vothick and Mrs. William B. Farnham, Rochester, N. Y., and Sherman Farnham, Seattle.

PUBLIC FORUM

A TRIBUTE TO ROGER

This tribute to Roger is written out of a sad heart by one who has greatly admired and loved Roger.

May your anguish as father and mother and sisters and brother be softened as time brings to you more clearly the meaning of such a life as Roger's.

In Roger's death, not only the community, but the world has lost a natural and inspiring leader, true friend, a faithful companion and an unusually well rounded and integrated character.

It is difficult for us to understand the Divine Providence that take from us one whose outlook and vision of life transcended that of the community of which he was a part—one who was dreaming and planning greater responsibilities for himself and others, and one who saw life in a truer perspective than is usual for one of his years—yet the few short years of his beautiful life would mean little if he is to become only a sentimental memory. Just as his life was an inspiration to others, his death should not end its effect on us. He will be held as an ideal, not only by those who know him best, but by all who knew him less intimately, and there are many.

Roger's personality was sincere. He put first things first, even as a younger boy in the elementary schools. His school work came before his play, yet he always had time for participation in many activities. His teachers felt his earnestness and sincerity. While others might hesitate for fear of making mistakes, he went forward making mistakes and becoming superior. His genuineness in work, in play, in friendship, made him an object of love and respect. He was genial, honest and straightforward in all of his relations. As business manager of the sales force for the Saturday Evening Post, the boys found him an inspiring leader as well as a true comrade.

Among other fine qualities and habits which made up his personality was his unselfishness. I never knew Roger to decide a course of action according to how he would feel, but always according to how Father and Mother would be affected.

No life can be measured by its length of years, for—
"We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
We should count time by heart throbs. He most lives
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best."

W. D. SWETLAND.

GEORGE F. STANNARD

In the death of George Stannard on June 8, 1937, Kalispell lost one of the sturdy pioneers who was instrumental in the building of the community through the early struggles of the west.

Born in Guernsey, Channel Isle, scion of wealthy landed Irish gentry, Nov. 11, 1860, George Stannard disdained the life of his rich family and chose a life of adventure and pioneering. He went to school at Kingston in Dublin, Ireland and later received his Bachelor of Arts degree at Dublin University. In his youth he was appointed a sub-lieutenant in the Kilkenny Fusiliers. He also served with the 84th regiment for three years, later resigning to leave for Banff, Alberta, Canada. Love of adventure then lured him to a $40 a month job as a cow-puncher on the Canadian plains and eastern Montana.

Being able to speak French fluently, Mr. Stannard was later offered a position as bookkeeper by the late T. J. Demers, Frenchtown merchant, in his store at the head of Flathead lake, later known as Demersville, which was later sold to the Missoula Mercantile company.

He next decided to engage in business on his own and entered the real estate game, acquiring large tracts of acreage.

Upon the completion of the Great Northern railway to the valley and the platting of the townsite of Kalispell, Mr. Stannard was quick to take advantage of a new enterprise and moved his office here. He later formed a partnership with the late Walter H. Griffin, who was also known as one of Kalispell's civic leaders.

Among the other posts of distinction which he held while active in Kalispell business and community life were the positions of secretary and later president of the Kalispell Chamber of Commerce and Exalted Ruler of the Elks. He held membership in the Blue Lodge, Knights Templar, Shrine and other Masonic orders.

Mr. Stannard was reared an Episcopal and held to that faith until the time of his death.

Like his later activity in business life, his younger days were outstanding for achievements. He was coxswain for the Kingston harbor boat club and was a member of the crew which won some of the most notable scull races of the day in England, the memories of which he cherished in the numerous cups, medals, certificates and other souvenirs. One of his prized possessions, which he frequently displayed to his friends, was a certificate of the Royal Humane society of England for the saving of drowning persons.

Mr. Stannard was married July 10, 1910, to Miss Jennette Swaney, daughter of Hugh Swaney, who passed away only a few years after their marriage. He is survived by his sister, Miss Elizabeth Stannard, who came across the seas a number of years ago to make her home with him and care for him in his declining years.
