The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a white marquisette gown fashioned with a sheer yoke and a full skirt and train falling gracefully from a long fitted bodice. The bridal veil arranged off the face brought out the simplicity and staidness of her attire. She carried a bouquet of white Kalamazoo roses, lilies of the valley and stephanotis secured with a lace scarf. Attending the bride as matron of honor was Frances Travis who wore a floor length gown of pastel green net and carried a bouquet of rapture roses.

The gown of the bride's mother was royal blue and the groom's mother was attired in powder blue, each with a gardenia corsage.

To the rich organ strains of Wagner's wedding march, from Lohengrin played by Miss Louis Hanger, the bride, on her father's arm, walked down the white covered aisle and was met at the altar by Lt. Divine who was attended by Lt. Robert Handle. Soft organ music continued during the ceremony and as the two knelt through the benediction, Provo's Intermezzo was played by Maribeth Kitt as a violin solo.

Preceding the ceremony with a festive atmosphere, Miss Kitt played two violin selections, Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes and Because, and Miss Louise Anderson sang At Dawning by Cadman and My Hero, both accompanied by Miss Hanger at the organ. Mendessohn's Recessional was used.

The ushers were Norman Street, Calvin Robinson, Jr., Carle O'Neil and Barry Braumberger.

An informal reception at the Saling home followed the ceremony with a few well-appointed baskets of flowers forming the simple and gracious decorations. Guests were greeted by the bride and groom before a fireplace banked with flowers. Mrs. Tom Elliot, Mrs. A. T. Muaro, Mrs. Charles McGihon and Mrs. S. F. Monroe poured while Mrs. Elsa Bernard served dainty sandwiches and wedding cake. Misses Nancy Nolan and Marjorie Hunt assisted Virginia Johnson with the serving.

After a short wedding trip Lt. and Mrs. Divine will make their home at Fort Lewis. For her honeymoon Mrs. Divine wore a flame red gaberdine traveling suit with white accessories.

The bride was graduated from Flathead County high school and Washington State College with a B.A. and B.E. and is affiliated with Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. This past year she has been supervisor of music in junior high and high school at Wapata, Wash.
