Flathead Tunnel Worker Killed

TREGO — William Marlow, 25, Trego, died early this morning at the Whitefish Memorial Hospital from injuries received in an industrial accident in Flathead Tunnel construction.

Marlow was injured about 1:45 a.m. when he was run over by a tracked construction vehicle. He was rushed to the hospital by the Walsh-Groves ambulance and died at Whitefish shortly after 3 a.m.

Al Davis, safety engineer at Walsh-Groves, is making full investigation today with the assistance of Lincoln County officials. Davis said, "Marlow was working in clean up of the concrete end of the invert (the tunnel floor) when he was injured. Apparently the driver of the crawler did not see Marlow and ran over him with the machine. We are withholding the identity of the driver at this time."

Marlow is survived by his widow and one child at his Trego home. She is expecting another child soon. First notice of the fatality went to Flathead County Deputy Coroner David O. Cutler who in turn notified Lincoln County Coroner Hal Gompf. Scene of the accident lays within Lincoln County jurisdiction.

The fatality is the third in the construction of Libby Dam project. Two men have been killed at Libby Dam itself, one from a motor grader tip over last fall and an iron workers foreman was electrocuted last February.

There is no decision yet whether an inquest will be called. In the past two deaths, the Corps of Engineers has convened a board of inquiry.

He was born and raised at Modesto, Calif. He had served in the U.S. Army and was discharged about two months ago, at which time he began work for the construction company.

He is survived by his widow, Sharon, and one son, Shawn, both of Trego; his parents, Reuben and Geneva Marlow of Turlock, Calif.; one brother, Kenneth Burks of Trego and one sister, Mrs. Joe (Lillie May) Mello of San Jose, Calif. Funeral arrangements for Mr. Marlow will be announced by the Austin Funeral Home.
