She enjoyed volunteer work for 20 years with the Red Cross Gray Ladies in Fresno. She especially loved working with the "Get Well Baby Clinic."

1991 Marvin 'Zano' Hafferman, 75

Marvin "Zano" Hafferman, 75, Kalispell, folded his hand and cashed in his chips. His dealing was done Sept. 7. He had a zest for life that only illness stopped.

Marvin was born March 25, 1916, in the township of Herman, Wis., to William and Ida Hafferman.

In 1917, the family moved to Montana after hearing of the good farming life "out West." They homesteaded near Gilford just in time to get it on the start of the dust bowl era.

In 1921, the family moved to Kalispell where his father found work as a lumberjack.

Marvin grew up in the Flathead, and he is remembered for his achievements in football, basketball and track at Flathead County High School. His interest in sports remained throughout his lifetime.

His education on life and survival began early. As a young boy he peddled newspapers on the street corners, in the saloons and at the card tables of Kalispell and he logged with his dad and older brothers to help the family finances.

At 17, during the Depression, he hopped the freight train and went on "the bum" learning firsthand about gambling, soup kitchens and flophouses with occasional overnight lodging in jails, but always returning, sooner or later, to Kalispell. He worked in CCC camps and on Forest Service lookouts before completing his education.

He married Beatrice Olberg in July 1941, and to that union Stanley and Beatrice "Honey" were born.

As a family man he became an electrician, which was to become his life's work. He was a lineman working on REA projects in this part of the country when rural America was being electrified. Marvin was a strong union leader serving as a steward and business agent on large construction projects from Hungry Horse to Clear, Alaska.

His wife died in 1973.

Marvin completed his electrical career in Alaska, where he was known as "Maverick." There he met Millie Zec and her children John, Jana and "Duke."

Upon his retirement, about 1976, they moved to Kalispell where he enjoyed being among friends, sports, fishing and gambling. He knew the odds and he played them well.

He was preceded in death by his parents; his wife, Beatrice and sisters Leona, Wilma and Isabel.

He is survived by his son, Stanley Hafferman of Anchorage, Alaska; his daughter, Beatrice Hartsell of Long Beach, Calif.; John Zec of Las Vegas, Nev.; Jana Zec of Everett, Wash.; Duke Hafferman of Las Vegas, Nev.; three brothers, William of Libby, Louis of Seattle, Wash., and Robert of Kalispell; three sisters, Lorena of Spokane, Wash., and Edith and Ethel of Phoenix, Ariz.; three grandchildren, Kimberly, Timothy and Brian; and numerous nieces and nephews.

At Marvin's request, his body was cremated and a private family service was held.

A fitting memory to Marvin, who always shared, would be a contribution to the Salvation Army or the Bean's Restaurant in Anchorage to help feed those in need.

Arrangements are under the direction of Weatherford Funeral Home.
